

Dear Sir/Madam,

Subject: Inquiry Regarding Options for Obtaining Working Rights in the Netherlands

I hope this letter finds you well. I am Mauricio Wolff, an Australian citizen currently employed by Atlassian, a global software company in Sydney. I seek your expertise and assistance in exploring pathways to obtain working rights in the Netherlands, aiming to use Atlassian's "Team Anywhere" program. This program facilitates employee transfers globally, contingent upon the individual having the requisite working rights in the destination country and Atlassian maintaining a legal presence there.

Historically, I lived in the Netherlands for five years as a high-skilled immigrant, working for Booking.com. This experience fostered a profound connection with the country and acquainted me with the Dutch work culture and legal framework, potentially simplifying obtaining residency with working rights anew.

Atlassian's policy allows for employee-initiated transfers without needing a new job offer or company sponsorship, provided the employee has the necessary working rights. While the company does sponsor visas if there is an opening at the employee's level, the absence of such openings at my level in the Amsterdam office prompts me to pursue alternative routes to secure working rights independently. Once obtained, I plan to apply for a self-initiated transfer, a process supported by my employer.

Given this, I am keen to explore any available options, including skilled migrant programs, entrepreneurship visas, or other schemes that support professional mobility and international collaboration.

I am interested in your advice or information you can provide regarding steps I can take to secure working rights in the Netherlands. This would enable me to initiate a self-initiated transfer under the Team Anywhere initiative. I am committed to adhering to the Dutch government's legal and procedural requirements. I am prepared to provide any additional information or documentation necessary to advance my application.

Thank you very much for considering my request. I look forward to your guidance and hope for a response to facilitate a successful transition back to the Netherlands.

Yours sincerely,

Mauricio Wolff
